LUCENTI STORY

For Biagio Lucenti, the tradition of fine craftsmanship reaches back for generations. His grandfather, and namesake was renowned for transforming architect's drawings into award-winning, intricate hand inlays made from the finest woods. In turn, he cultivated a demonstrated talent for detailed craftsmanship in his only son, Giuseppe. In addition to the artistry, the elder Biagio passed along an appreciation for the intricacies of running a successful business to both his son and grandson, resulting in the younger Biagio continuing his family's legacy and establishing a company dedicated to providing the design industry with expert consultation and custom interiors showcasing Italy's legendary design aesthetic. When Biagio arrived in America in 2002, he worked for the top Italian brands in the interior design industry in New York City. He eventually decided to do what comes naturally and had been passed down to him from generations by opening his own company; Lucenti Interiors.

Modular Integrated Slats System

Architecture and Interior Design have always been grounded on two foundational elements. On the one hand, the structural element, necessary, fixed — the one marking and defining spaces.

On the other hand, the finishing element, internal or external, that has always been responsible for a space's emotional factor — the story turning spaces into places. Traditionally joined to masonry, finishing and covering elements become technique and, in modern architectural language, true second skin to a space, applied to grant flexibility and lightness. This is the context DresswallStripes aims at innovating.

DresswallStripes isn't just like any other slats system

Our exclusive fixing clip enables a frictionless installation of single Stripes to the frame. This allows the designer to benefit from greater flexibility whilst reducing maintenance costs.

The spacing between Stripes, their number and length are defined on a case-by-case basis in light of the desired effect to grant ultimate expression freedom to the designer. Stripes can be fixed both to walls and ceilings and, when it comes to the latter, both in adheret or suspended form.
